XI Fundus

Congress on the rural world
in the Roman Period

The economy of the villas

The deadline for the submission of face-to-face communications for the XI Fundus Congress is opened. The call is aimed at researchers on the rural economy in the Roman Period, in the broadest sense of the term and without geographical limitations, based on the example of villas. The papers, which last 15 minutes, can be presented in any language.

The meeting aims to be a place to share and discuss the advances that over the last decades have taken place in the study of the economy of villas, not only at the conceptual level, through new approaches and paying attention to fields of study until recently secondary or directly untreated, but also methodological. Special interest in those contributions that deal with dynamics of the rural economy, economic strategies of establishments, operational chains and production processes and the analysis of productive infrastructures, either through particular cases or joint views.

The opening speech will be given by Prof. Annalisa Marzano, from the University of Bologna.
